DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1,2, and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stocker et al ("Stocker", U.S. Patent no. 5,735,511) in view of Ichimaru (U.S. Patent no. 6,507,976).

Stocker discloses a buffer comprising a grommet (12, 14) having a hollow tube portion, an attaching portion (12) and an elastic engaging piece (50, 54). Stocker further shows an engaging member (16) and a damper main member (10, 20). The engaging member is slidably disposed in the hollow tube portion and has engaging steps (70, 72) engaging the elastic engaging piece. The damper main member is slidably disposed in the engaging member (16) and has an abutting portion (26) for abutting against the engaging member (16). Stocker fails to disclose means for moving the damper main member as claimed.

3. Ichimaru teaches a buffer device comprising a grommet (21), a damper main member (11) and a means disposed between the grommet and damper main member (31) for moving the damper main member in a direction away from the grommet and fixing the damper main member relative to the grommet so the damper main member projects from the grommet by a desired distance. This arrangement allows for the projecting height of the damper member to be easily adjusted. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify Stocker as taught by Ichimaru, such that stocker includes the means for moving of Ichimaru, in order to allow for easy adjustment of the projection height of the damper member. The combination would result in damper main member of Stocker being adjustable relative to the engaging member of Stocker, by the means taught by Ichimaru.

4. With respect to claim 2, Ichimaru shows the damper main member to have a first screw portion (16), and the means (31) including a collar having a second screw portion (32) engaged with the first screw portion.

5. With respect to claim 4, Stocker discloses the damper main member (10, 20) to include a stopper (outer wall of 20) for restricting movement in a counter insertion direction. Examiner considers the outer wall of 20 to be a stopper because it frictionally engages the engaging member, and resists removal from the engaging member.

Allowable Subject Matter

6. Claims 3 and 5-7 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The following references are cited to further show the state of the art with respect to adjustable height buffers: Rapata et al, Morel et al, and Bettini.
